

Appendix B: Do people talk about plans for death and dying?

- A recent survey in Scotland indicates that nearly three-quarters of people surveyed (74%) had not discussed what their wishes would be if they did not have long to live. 79% of people also didn't have any written plans for their end of life care, financial wishes or funeral plans. (Ipsos MORI)
- The National Survey of Bereaved People identified that just one third of people (34%) had told their loved ones where they wanted to die.
